Travel expenses / driving costs for an outcall on request

The required time for travelling is the basis to calculate eventual travel expenses for an outcall.

Furthermore the time spend for travelling has to correspond with the duration of an appointment.

For example: Is there a travelling time of 2 hrs. (forth & back) required for an outcall, I wouldn't offer a 1 hr. service at all. A 2 hrs. service would cause 50 € travel expenses, a 6 hrs. service 20 € and there wouldn't be any additional expenses for an overnight service in this sample.

Payment

When we meet you can either pay cash (EUR, CHF and USD only) or by PayPal.

For outcalls a deposit via PayPal (fast) or bank transfer (needs maybe several days) is usually required! The deposit amount depends on:

- the distance I have to drive for our appointment.
- the time of day for our appointment. Less between 11am to 9pm, more between 10pm to 11am.
- how spontaneous your request is. Short termed results in a higher, long termed in a lower deposit.

I have to ask for a deposit for an outcall because ruthlessness appears to be an acceptable trait to a substantial number of people.

As nobody wants to transfer money to an unknown person, I invite you for a call to get a personal impression. On every PayPal transaction I use my full name, which is identical to my name in the imprint.

 If I have to cancel an already paid appointment, you'll get your money back immediately or you can reschedule it according your preference.

If YOU cancel a firmly booked and already paid appointment, you can reschedule it (once, not several times) within the next three months, but it'll be the regular rate. There will be no refunding of already paid amounts.

Whenever there is a no show without cancellation or no rescheduling within three months, already paid amounts expire.

HOW TO HAVE A SATISFYING APPOINTMENT:

Making a reservation in time

I try to do my best, if I get a spontaneous request. But terms like "available now, in 15 minutes" make no sense when asking for an appointment. I'm no emergency ambulance. Instead I want to spend pleasurable hours together with you.

Discretion guaranteed

I've been doing my business now for several years, very open and official. This would certainly be impossible, if I had done any kind of nonsense with the names and data of my guests.

So please be open and honest when arranging an appointment – especially when asking for a hotel outcall. Wrong data and names have often a ridiculous effect and may cause unwanted attention (what kind of hotel guest may somebody be who gets phone calls from people who don't know his name? Quite embarrassing for me, but also for you!).

By the way: Markus is my real name, which is also written in my passport.

No bargaining please

If you think the rates for my service are too high, then simply don't make an appointment.

Politeness is a good idea

Some men unfortunately forget their good manners when asking for an appointment – maybe because of nervousness and out of fear from indiscretions. A phone call (also an e-mail) should begin with a "hello" followed by the introduction of the name – rather than "are you available now?" or "what's your rate?". Otherwise one will be seen as a caveman without any education. I guess nobody wants to appear in this light.

... and now I'm looking forward to talk to you on the phone and making your acquaintance soon 😊
